JUNE/JULY 1994 - VOL. 34 NO. 4

SUMMER SPECIALS! GAY PRIDE SPECIALS! NEW PROGRAMS!

Report to the Listener

Valerie van Isler, General Manager

"THERE IS NO FREEDOM WITHOUT CHOICE, AND THERE IS NO CHOICE WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE. AT THE ROOT OF ALL LIBERTY IS THE FREEDOM TO KNOW."

And there has never been a time like this. This spring, as the world watched via satellite and cable, the South African people went to the polls in an historic election which placed Nelson Mandela as the first African president of that country. Mandela, who led the fight against the apartheid system in the streets and in the courts for decades, had been confined to jail for than 20 years as a political prisoner in his own land. As he said for years and repeated in his inaugural address, "there is no easy walk to freedom." All people of good will should extend their hands and their help to the people of South Africa as they enter this new time, but still face many of the old challenges.

WBAI is now more than half-way through our programming and fiscal year. Based on the strong support from our members especially this winter and spring, we have kept on target for listener income. This year, we have to bring in at least $1 million dollars and really need to raise even more to keep this station on the air , pay our bills and meet our obligations at the end of the fiscal period. It's no longer a secret that the proposed sale of another public radio station [WNYC] by the new mayor would seriously diminish the information flow to all the citizens of New York. In this age of the "information super-highway" there is ever more media consolidation and fewer voices to raise the issues an d speak truth to power. Your continued support will help WBAI do just that...this year and in the future as part of the Pacifica mission and our tradition of excellence.

That tradition of service to many communities is reflected in this edition of our program guide as we celebrate June as GAY PRIDE month with special programming for the 25th anniversary of Stonewall. WBAI and Pacifica radio will do a national satellite broadcast of the Pride March on Sunday, June 26 and special reports on Saturday, June 25 featuring the history and the work of the gay rights movement in this country and internationally .

In July, WBAI is presenting an ALL DAY SPECIAL ON JEWISH AMERICA which will be broadcast on Sunday, July 10. This important program will include segments produced by Judith Sloan, Mimi Rosenberg, Blossom Neushatz and many others on the culture and politics of contemporary Jewish Americans. At the end of the month starting on July 18th, we begin our summer-fund with five days of programming on the theme of "Our Americas" with specials on international issues, health care, the arts and music.

A very special thanks to all the members who joined the station during our Spring membership drive & to our wonderful vo lunteers who helped us so generously with their time and dedication in May.

9. Donate In-kind Gifts or Services. Goods and services such as office, computer and audio equipment, printing, design services, photography and other professional expertise can be valuable to WBAI and a tax deduction for you or your business. In addition, the donation of professional services may be eligible for matching funds. Right now we are urgently in need of:

- Computer equipment
- Computer Consulting Services

GAY & LESBIAN PRIDE - 1994!

WBAI Radio (99.5 FM) extends a warm welcome to the hundreds of thousands of residents and visitors who will gather in our fair city this June to celebrate a variety of historical Gay & Lesbian commemorations. WBAI will be there providing live, on-the-scene coverage of the following: Gay Games IV & Cultural Festival (Unity '94). The event's theme and spirit is unity, and its purpose is to enhance the dignity, pride and self-respect of lesbians and gay men everywhere.

The Gay Games were founded by the late Dr. Tom Waddell, an Olympic decathlete who believed, "To do one's personal best is the ultimate goal of human achievement." The first competition was held in San Francisco in 1982. The Games have continued to grow in scope and vision and participation. From June 18-25, Unity '94 will host a record 10,000 athletes and thousands of artists from 38 countries, and 500,000 visitors.

Unity '94 will coincide with the Stonewall 25 celebration, which takes place on June 26, honoring the 25th anniversary of the Stonewall Riots of 1969. The June 27 riots were led by people of color, drag queens and kings who rioted at the Stonewall Bar in Greenwich Village. The protests against police and social harassment and repression then sparked a Gay Liberation Movement, which was capped in 1993, when the United Nations recognized the International Lesbian & Gay Association as a Non-Governmental Organization (NGO), acknowledging that the struggle for human rights is, indeed, universal.

On Sunday, June 26, these two milestones will be joined in a celebration the likes of which the world has never seen. Lesbians, gay men, bisexuals, transgender and drag people will gather from all over the country for the International March on the United Nations to Affirm the Human Rights of Lesbians and Gay People. New York City's Annual Pride March will this year start at 12:00 noon at the United Nations Plaza, 1st Avenue in the 40s, and conclude at a rally in Central Park. Later that week, the 16th Annual World Conference of the International Lesbian & Gay Association will be held from Tuesday, June 28 - Sunday, July 3rd. These are clearly events that belong to all of us. And WBAI Radio (99.5 FM) will be there to bring you live, uninterrupted coverage. Be there!

Health Action: a New Program on Medical Politics, Activism & Self-Empowerment

WBAI is proud to launch this new hour-long health program every Tuesday evening from 9:00-10:00 pm. This represents a broadened theme and expanded time for our former series, "AIDS: Paths to Self-Empowerment and Living." The producers of the program, Nicholas Cimorelli, Bob Lederer and Betsy Lenke, will coordinate the new series, which will include guest hosts.

An important legacy of the continuing grass-roots AIDS movement–and especially the heroic people with AIDS who have led it–is a rich array of lessons applicable to people with other life-threatening illnesses and debilitating conditions. Health action will examine these lessons, plus insights from other groups' experiences (such as the breast cancer movement and drug detox programs in communities of color), about activism and self-empowerment, theories and treatments, and support and healing.

Health Action's weekly up-to-the-minute reports will include hard-hitting investigations into such topics as the covered-up environmental causes of illnesses, the pharmaceutical industry's hidden role in setting research policy, and the institutional racism and sexism pervading the medical establishment. We'll also analyze confusing and distorted media coverage of new medical studies. Health Action will interview health practitioners, scientists, activists, and most important, people struggling with their own illnesses. Among the goals of Health Action are:

- To cover the newest accessible treatments, both conventional and alternative, and practical ways to integrate them.
- To provide information and analysis on the political, economic and institutional obstacles to health empowerment, and how to overcome them.
- To offer a forum for health activist movements to share their issues and programs with the public, and to facilitate listener involvement in activism.
- To cover the particular and often-ignored health empowerment issues of women and people of color.

So, tune in and contact WBAI Radio with your suggestions and information to help make Health Action a true example of radio-active programming!

SCIENCE AS REVOLUTION - DR. MICHIO KAKU

"When I was 8 years old, I heard a story that would stay with me for the rest of my life. I remember my schoolteachers telling the class about a great scientist who had just died. They call[ed] him one of the greatest in all history. They said that very few people could understand his ideas, but that his discoveries changed the entire world and everything around us. I didn't understand much of what they were trying to tell us, but what more intrigued me about this man was that he died before he could complete his greatest discovery. They said he spent years on this theory, but he died with his unfinished papers still sitting on his desk.

"I was fascinated by [Einstein's] story. To a child, this was a great mystery. What was his unfinished work? What problem could possibly be so difficult and so important that such a great scientist would dedicate years of his life to its pursuit? Curious, I decided to learn all I could about Albert Einstein and his unfinished theory. When I exhausted the books in our local library, I began to scour libraries and bookstores across the city, eagerly searching for more clues. I soon learned that this story was far more exciting than any murder mystery and more important than anything I could ever imagine. I decided that I would try to get to the root of this mystery, even if I had to become a theoretical physicist to do it."

Dr. Michio Kaku, progressive science officer on WBAI's Wednesday night airwaves, budding comedian on the station's POISONED ARTS MINUTE, theoretical physicist at CUNY's City College, and a Trekkie to boot! What makes this creative element tick? Perhaps it was the time in high school, when he built his own atom smasher–one with a magnetic field 20,000 times the size of the Earth's....

After the home-made experiment and a number of high school science awards, Michio caught the eye of Edward Teller, the father of the Hydrogen Bomb. With some help from Mrs. Teller, Kaku was awarded a scholarship to Harvard University in 1965. But, it was a Faustian bargain, he says, for Teller expected that Michio and other proteges would go on to work to make mini-nuclear bombs.

While Kaku did join Teller's so-called "Star Warriors" team, his career path took a sharp turn to the left after his 1972 experience in the Vietnam War where he served in the infantry. It was there that Michio realized that "physics is power and it should be harnessed by people who have the people's interest at heart." While he was quite patriotic, morale was low. "The country was falling apart," he explains, "while over 500 American soldiers were being killed every week and the United States was on the wrong side– propping up French colonialism." Kaku then decided to take a temporary leave of absence to study at Berkeley.

One day, he turned on the radio and discovered WBAI's Berkeley sister station, KPFA, and "a whole new way to look at the world. I realized that it was possible to rationally criticize your government," he says. After teaching at Princeton University, Michio was offered a professorship at City College where he currently holds tenure. Once in New York, he tuned in again and made contact with WBAI. "I wanted to create a science program for people like myself– confused." Kaku has hosted WBAI's "Explorations" for 10 years now, thus making science simplistic for hundreds of thousands of listener-sponsors. Ever the gentleman, however, Michio often extends an invitation to right-wingers ("of which there are many in the nuclear physics field," he points out).

In his latest endeavor, Kaku has again created information for the masses in the form of "Hyperspace: a Scientific Odyssey Through Parallel Universes, Time Warps and the 10th Dimension." (A national best-seller, the book is currently and selling 2,500 copies a week.) Using simple yet creative language, illustrations, and science fiction metaphors, Michio outlines his premise on how the four fundamental forces, gravity, electricity/magnetism, and the strong and weak nuclear powers, may be related "and the key to unlocking an additional six dimensions through which we may travel to the outer reaches of the universe and with which to harness unlimited power" (see sidebar).

"Scientifically, the hyperspace theory goes by the names of Kaluza-Klein theory and supergravity. But its most advanced formulation is called superstring theory, which even predicts the precise number of dimensions: ten. The usual three dimensions of space (length, width, and breadth) and one of time are now extended by six more spatial dimensions," writes Kaku. He also believes in the possibility of higher dimension entities, and thinks that the key to making communication is through unified theory. Michio's particular contribution to this decades-long pioneer effort is that he simplified the premise down to a one-inch long, easily understood master equation. (With something as spectacular as this, one would assume that the government would rush to fund it, right? Wrong. Although it would take only $1 billion a year to support research, our fearful leader, President Clinton, eliminated the project in 1993. "Star Wars," on the other hand, cost $3 billion dollars to maintain.)

Why do we need nuclear power and what is it doing on WBAI, anyway? To those who believe that manipulation of the atom is fundamentally wrong (i.e., science = evil), Kaku concedes that while "the Pentagon has used physics to enforce a New World Order ... not unlike 'Star Trek,' we are close to a planetary government ... the sweep of human history, shows us that science invariably creates mass wealth and democracy." Michio understands science as power, and points to the industrial revolution, which ended feudalism, and revolutionaries such as V.I. Lenin and Mao, and artists such as Picasso, H.G. Wells, and Lewis Carroll, who studied mathematics and the principles of dimensional theory, which they then applied to their work.

Despite the human record of abuse (Kaku himself was the subject of x-ray testing in the 4th grade, while his parents were interned in United States concentration camps from 1942 to 1946 along with 110,000 other Japanese Americans despite the fact that they were both born and raised in California), Michio firmly believes that technology is God's gift to humankind and that it can and will be harnessed by and on behalf of humanity.

"Science is, in fact, the enemy of tyranny," he continues. "Let's not forget that Internet [an international information network created by the Pentagon], is now available to most everyone. The march of history shows that science brings about more freedom. In any case, you cannot control people because history is written by people. Science is a weapon, and we should use everything at our disposal."

Undaunted by America's lack of appreciation for science, Kaku firmly believes that "the average working person has a respect for science and learning," a principle which he applies daily while teaching City College's mostly of-color student body. While the school's Science Department has a 70% drop-out rate in Freshman Physics, Michio's course, "Physics as Science Fiction," enjoys a 100% completion rate. Using picture slides and maps, humorous anecdotes and sci-fi metaphors, Kaku, indeed, makes learning fun-and-mental ("Science should not be just memorization, which is guaranteed to crush the imagination. Kids are born scientists, curious, and exploratory"). A die-hard Star Trek fan, Michio uses the popular program to show science and non-science majors what's possible ("anti-matter engines and warp drive are actually possible," he says, "although the transporter would probably be impossible").

In addition to hosting EXPLORATIONS (Wednesdays, 8:00 pm), and guest-starring on POISONED ARTS (Mon-Thurs., 3:59 pm) with fellow Trekkie, René Auberjonois, aka "Odo"), Dr. Kaku has appeared on television programs such as "Nova," "Innovation," and "Nightline." Michio's next frontier will be a talk at the Open Center, 83 Spring Street, June 10, at 8:00 pm.

One of my happiest childhood memories is of crouching next to [a] pond, mesmerized by the brilliantly colored carp swimming slowly beneath the water lilies. I thought, What a strange world theirs must be! Living their entire lives in the shallow pond, the carp would believe that their "universe" consisted of the murky water and the lilies. The carp and I spent our lives in two distinct universes, never entering each other's world, yet were separated by only the thinnest barrier, the water's surface.

I once imagined that there may be carp "scientists" living among the fish. They would, I thought, scoff at any fish who proposed that a parallel world could exist just above the lilies. To a carp "scientist," the only things that were real were what the fish could see or touch. The pond was everything. An unseen world beyond the pond made no scientific sense.

Once I was caught in a rainstorm. I noticed that the pond's surface was bombarded by thousands of tiny raindrops. The pond's surface became turbulent, and the water lilies were being pushed in all directions by water waves. Taking shelter from the wind and rain, I wondered how all this appeared to the carp. To them, the water lilies would appear to be moving around by themselves, without anything pushing them. Since the water they lived in would appear invisible, much like the air and space around us, they would be baffled. Unable to comprehend that there could be waves on the unseen surface, the[ir scientists] would conclude that lilies could move without being touched because a mysterious, invisible entity called a force acted between them.

Once I imagined what would happen if I reached down and lifted one of the carp "scientists" out of the pond. I wondered how this would appear to the rest of the carp. To them, it would be a truly unsettling event. They would first notice that one of their "scientists" had disappeared from their universe. Wherever they would look, there would be no evidence of the missing carp in their universe. Then, seconds later, when I threw him back into the pond, the "scientist" would abruptly reappear out of nowhere. To the other carp, it would appear that a mistake had happened.

After collecting his wits, the "scientist" would tell a truly amazing story. "Without warning," he would say, "I was somehow lifted out of the universe (the pond) and hurled into a mysterious nether world, with blinding lights and strangely shaped objects that I had never seen before. The strangest of all was the creature who held me prisoner, who did not resemble a fish in the slightest. I was shocked to see that it had no fins whatsoever, but nevertheless could move without them. It struck me that the familiar laws of nature no longer applied in this nether world. Then, just as suddenly, I found myself thrown back into our universe." (This story, of course, of a journey beyond the universe would be so fantastic that most of the carp would dismiss it as utter poppycock.)

I often think that we are like the carp swimming contentedly in that pond. We live out our lives in our own "pond," confident that our universe consists of only those things we can see or touch. Like the carp, our universe consists of only those things we can see or touch. We smugly refuse to admit that parallel universes or dimensions can exist next to each ours, just beyond our grasp. If our scientists invent concepts like forces, it is only because they cannot visualize the invisible vibrations that fill the empty space around us. Some scientists sneer at the mention of higher dimensions because they cannot be conveniently measured in the laboratory.

As reflected in his 94-95 NYC Budget, Mayor Giuliani is unabashedly continuing the long-run trend of down-sizing health, education, and welfare services while building up the police. His "contribution" to the ideology and practice of down-sizing is his new spin that all areas of government, except police and fire, can do more with less. By restructuring government and privatizing services, the poor and the working class will not suffer. If we buy this, somewhere down the road there'll be a "for sale" sign on the Brooklyn Bridge. Under former mayor David Dinkins, there was at least some regret that this road "had" to be traveled. Under Giuliani, down-sizing government is the road to private sector prosperity. And so, Reagan's "trickle-down" economics has at last come down to the Big Apple. While the City Council may nibble around the harsh edges of Giuliani-land, no serious challenge to this strategy has emerged. On June 2nd, WBAI's Building Bridges will take up the challenge in a two-hour special drawing together leaders from academia, community and labor groups, and even some politicians, to explore the damage that is being done to our town and what other options are available to keep hope and New York City alive. HEALTHSYLES

"Healthstyles" is the only regular radio program in New York City that is produced and moderated by registered nurses. This past year, "Healthstyles" received the Public Health Association of New York City's annual media award. It is produced by the Nursing & Health Resources Network, consisting of Gwen Alford, PNP, Barbara Glickstein, RN MPH MS, Diana Mason, RN Ph.D. FAAN, Renee Trambert, RN MPH, and Melinda Wheeler, RN, MSN.

The hour-long, live program focuses on personal health topics, health care issues, and health policy. Because the nurses work in health care, they are able to spot issues that other media may not even recognize as pertinent to listening audiences. "we were possibly the first media to cover the politics of AIDS and violence as a public health issue," says Barbara Glickstein, "and we were covering tuberculosis long before the public recognized that it had become an epidemic."

The live format includes pre-taped segments, a community bulletin board on health affairs, and listener call-ins. "an important goal of the program is to enable listeners to discuss, debate, and shape health issues, such as health care reform," notes Diana Mason. Listeners are encouraged to share their ideas and are given information to support their activism on health issues.

The nurses operate as a collective that represents the diversity of voices that can be found in the profession. The differences in ethnicity and professional experience provides a richness of perspectives that we all appreciate. Gwen Alford is a pediatric nurse practitioner in the Acupuncture Program for Substance Abuse at Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx. Dr. Diana Mason is the Director of Nursing Education & Research at Beth Israel Hospital. Barbara Glickstein is an adjunct professor of health policy at Pace University. Ms .Renee Trambert and Melinda Wheeler are staff nurses at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

The program is produced in collaboration with the New York Counties Registered Nurses Association. Members of the Association have been producing a radio program at WBAI since 1979, when a monthly women's program, "Everywomanspace," was begun. "Healthstyles" has been on the air since 1985 to address the broadening scope of health-related issues affecting the increasingly diverse population of New York City. (Fridays - 1:00 pm)

Gay & Lesbian Independent Broadcasters
An "Outlook" on WBAI Programming

As an African-American lesbian, I have had the opportunity in the last two years to produce a variety of programs which have benefited the lesbian and gay community. I have acquired a considerable amount of knowledge by working in and through the lesbian and gay community.

Many of my programs have instilled in me a pride for my existence such as the program I produced, "Talking to the Elders." This particular program informed the community of the countless achievements of those before us. It has been no easy task for our elders, people of color who have overcome many barriers which have been eliminated before our arrival.

Producing my first program about Unity Fellowship Church, New York, a church for the lesbian and gay community in the black tradition, I got to inside the workings of the church. They started on a small scale of ten people in 1992. The message of loving yourself, and harmonious living by the founding pastor, Elder Zachery G. Jones, has been rewarding, uplifting and strongly recognized. This church has now grown to a congregation of 500 or more in less than two years! I was pleased and delighted to have brought this message of peace and love, to the airwaves, for our lesbian and gay brothers and sisters.

Outlooks has taught me many lessons. And being a part of the WBAI family has given my self-esteem a boost for the better. It has been no easy task collaborating programs that would inform and entertain the lesbian and gay community, on a monthly basis. But I have done so with the help of many persons on the staff of WBAI and Outlooks.

Being an African-American lesbian journalist I have gone into the lesbian and gay community unannounced with a tape recorder and big ideas and was met warmly by many of my peers. They have been very helpful and free with their knowledge. They have come onto the airwaves to shares with others. For that I am grateful. This has shown me that anything may be accomplished with the help of others. We are all one. We all walk under the same sun, through the same rain, and we will all walk to freedom together.

It is my dream to continue to bring the message to the lesbian and gay community by way of WBAI. I look forward to working, once again, during the Gay Pride Month, to be the open channel for those lesbian and gays who are bedridden. Thanks to Outlooks and WBAI, you will be there too.

Gonzalo Aburto: Gay Pride & Latinos

June, 1994. We're not just celebrating Gay Pride, but also the 25th anniversary of the 1969 Stonewall riots–considered the beginning of the modern era of the fight for lesbian and gay rights. That particular fight happened here in New York, and it shook the world. Soon after Stonewall, people in other countries began fighting against police and social repression.

I was living in Mexico at the time, and began working with a local group of lesbians and gays. We also looked toward Spain where there was as strong movement. Even though Franco was still alive, gays in Catalonia were very radical. (But, it wasn't until in 1978 that people were ready to take to the streets there and demand their rights, as they had already done in Argentina.) By 1971, we were very organized; meeting and discussing published reports from various New York grassroots organizations.

Our crew, el group lambda de liberacíon homosexuales, was one of the first to work openly in Mexico around gay and lesbian issues. In 1978, we organized the first lesbian and gay pride demonstration in Mexico City. We went out to schools, universities, and democratic organizations, urging them to understand that our issues were also part of the struggle and the democratic movement. We fought to be included as a contingent in their demonstrations. When the group broke up later that year, I moved to the United States; to New York City. (Sadly, most of my Mexican peers, those who began the struggle, are now gone because of AIDS.)

It's the same here in the United States. Those who were at the forefront during the early days of the movement, and those who supported me, are all gone. Looking back, I am also disheartened to see how the older gay and lesbian organizations (Lavender Left, el comite homosexual Latino Americana), all very active during the 70s and the beginning of the 80s), have such little presence in the present day movement.

Latinos, in particular, were among the mostly of-color drag queens who first confronted the police at Stonewall. Among those beaten and arrested during the riots was an undocumented worker from Argentina. (Now, you can imagine how deep the resentment was towards a Latino homosexual–especially one without papers–in 1969.) He threw himself out of a window in desperation, fell onto a metal fence and later died at St. Vincent's hospital, where we held a big demonstration. We wanted justice. While we should now see him as a hero of the movement, because he was Latino and undocumented, he remains ignored.

While the gay and lesbian movement has advanced, it still doesn't acknowledge our diversity, especially here in New York, which has always had a strong Black and Latino presence. All too often, gay and lesbian Latinos only make the news when someone is murdered. Otherwise, we don't exist. While there are some Latino gay and lesbian organizations, they still don't reflect the full spectrum of the Latino community here in New York. This disparity is unacceptable in light of such critical issues as AIDS.

Despite the anonymity, however, we still have many people who have played important roles in the fight for justice, including Manuel Ramos Otero, a Puerto Rican writer who died of AIDS in 1990. Otero is renowned for his writing and was one of the first openly-gay Latinos working in the universities.

What myself and others are trying to do is to rescue our history, and to construct a new future. Nowadays, when you go to the Village, you'll find teens who think things are allright now because they can come out and hang out. But, our responsibility as their elders is to teach them that things have not always been (and still aren't) so easy; traveling from bar to club without the police or some psycho harassing and extorting money or sex from you. They don't know how hard we fought to integrate community events such as the Puerto Rican parade by forming gay and lesbian groups so that the youth of today can march proudly and without fear.

Since 1990, we have worked to make AIDS an issue in the Puerto Rican community. (A 25% AIDS rates among babies born in the South Bronx is, unfortunately, not surprising. You'll see the same in the Lower East Side, and El Barrio. Whenever you have a concentration of Latino people, AIDS will be the point that closes the deadly circle.)

But, despite a number of gay and lesbian Latino caucuses, no one wants to talk about AIDS in the Latino community. (Our leaders are gone now, so that's not surprising.) Still, we need to look at the fact that after 13 years–and we need to say this constantly–AIDS continues to affect all of us.

The white gay community has gained a number of service programs. But, in the Latino community, there are no comparative services. Not surprising, however, since those who control the movement are, for the most part, in bed with Washington, and are out of touch with the reality that this is a country of immigrants. New York City is the biggest examples of that, yet we are always overlooked.

I've been speaking on these issues since I arrived at WBAI 7 years ago and our representation has still not improved. So, I continue to keep this discussion going. WBAI is like an oasis; a place where you can say whatever you think and bring in your community to talk about their feelings, needs and struggles. I'm proud to be here. WBAI is a model. If achieved in other countries, things would be different. ALTERNATIVA LATINA (Friday, 2:00 pm), is one place to do that. But we still need much more.

I don't, however, consider myself a gay journalist. Too often, the gay & other movements will cater to a too-narrow audience. While there should be space and time to talk about our issues, creating specific programming for gays is, in my opinion, ghettoizing. I don't want to be recognized as a gay journalist, because I should be able to (and do) write about anything. I do write about gays, and do I speak out, however, because if I don't, who will? Still, my feeling is why should it matter what your sexual orientation is?

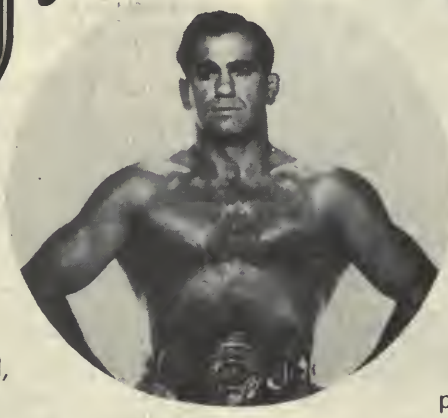
Lightshow



Trinidadian political & social critic C. L. R. James was also a respected sportscaster. Indeed, he is credited with developing his cricket commentary into a metaphor for an entire civilization. What, then, might be an appropriate metaphoric model for a culture sustained largely by macho posturing and the unstated pretense that the game is not fixed?

WBAI's "Lightshow" is proud to present a weekly professional wrestling update. This five-minute report has been broadcast since October, 1992, and is New York's longest-running wrestling radio segment. It is hosted by Evan Ginzburg, editor and publisher of "Wrestling Then and Now," the dance theater form's oldest nostalgia and history newsletter. The segment features a summary of wrestling news, announcements of upcoming events, and commentary.

"Lightshow" also presents an expanded wrestling report on the last Friday of each second month. Featured have been interviews with superstars of the present and past, including Sherri Martel, Lou Thesz, Jim Cornette, Ox Baker, Gary Albright, Missy Hyatt, Paul E. Dangerously, Pez Whatley, Al Costello, and many others. Listener phone calls are taken as well. In addition, special interview segments have been featured on many weekly editions of "Lightshow" throughout the year, often coinciding with major wrestling events.

On the interview and phone-in segments, Evan Ginzburg is joined by Frederick GeoBold, host and producer of "Lightshow," Eddie Goldman, the New York producer of public access television's "Canvas Cavity," and Doctor Professor, Associate Professor of Theoretical and Applied Erudition (tenure pending), University of Infomania Junior College, and correspondent for the "Midnight Weekly Reader." These live, in-studio segments also cover wrestling from many angles, including serious analysis and discussion of important social issues related to wrestling, such as racial and ethnic stereotyping, insider news coverage, and a humorous look at the often wacky goings on in the world of wrestling.

To those who believe that the sport is merely rehearsed theatrics, we invite you to tune in and join an estimated 8,000 to 12,000 listener-fans who know that improvisation is a vital component of this beloved American art form.

"Lightshow" is broadcast each Friday night/Saturday morning from 3:00 - 5:00 am. The weekly wrestling update is aired between 3:30 and 4:00 am. To inquire about arranging on-air interviews or for further information, contact Frederick GeoBold at (212) 279-0707, Monday through Friday, 9:00 am to 5:00 pm. (Photo: wrestling veteran Lou Thesz.)

Chet Jackson - Nightflyte

Holding true to form is one of the reasons that Chet Jackson has been able to withstand the ebb and flow that has gripped the music industry for the last few decades. In addition to numerous highly rated programs and specials throughout the years, Chet's now holds his own on "Nightflyte" (Saturdays - 3:00 am) where he offers a smorgasbord of R & B, Jazz, and "golden oldies" – all skillfully seasoned by his debonair wit and technical wizardry. Among the folks who have dropped by "Nightflyte" throughout the years are Vinny Brown, WYKS, director/producer Melvin Van Peoples, Gerald Austin, Blue Magic, Force MDs, MC Lyte, Kool Moe Dee, Oran Juice Jones, journalist Utrice Leid and veteran politico Bill Lynch.

Ask him who inspired him to get into the business, and Jackson straight-away lists Hank Spann, Jerry Bledsoe, Gary Byrd, and Frankie Crocker of 1600 WWRL radio fame. "These men had their own unique styles and personas," explains Jackson. "What they said on their air made you think and definitely made you feel good about yourself and other people."

Radio station WALF on the campus of Alfred University, gave Jackson his first on-air position as a disk jockey. (Jackson was then enrolled at the University studying ceramic engineering.) "Those were the days! I had to walk over a mile across campus on those nights when the temperature would fall below zero in the winter to turn the transmitter off," he reminisces. With the success of his first radio show, Chet was truly bitten by the bug. His next stop was radio station WNEC at New England College in Springfield, MA, where he changed his major to Communications.

Eager to expand his broadcasting knowledge, Jackson then enrolled in Announcer Training Studios in New York City. While at ATS, Chet studied radio engineering, voice-over techniques, news announcing, and pre- and post-production techniques. Soon after graduating, Jackson landed a gig at WBAI Radio as an engineer. Chet then complimented his growing portfolio by doing voice-overs and production work for four years until he was given a regular slot in 1985 where he developed a highly radio program, "R &B Street," and used his engineering and production talents to help other on-air personalities develop very successful shows such as "Illumination," "Stolen Moments," and "Take the 'A' Train."

In addition to his radio program, Chet serves as Music Coordinator for WBAI's Arts Department. He also represents and promotes new and established artists. Jackson has worked with Petite, She, Passion, and Dr. York on the York label. He has also served as a field rep for Blue Magic and Oran Juice Jones on the Def Jam label. What's next for Chet Jackson? The sky's the limit for this maverick of the industry!

Chet Jackson will be on hiatus throughout the summer while producer Peter Paul takes a turn at the mike! Stay tuned for his return!

7:00 As I Please - Summer Series! This year, Simon Loekle will feature Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels. Successfully played as a children's book, Gulliver's Travels is, in fact, the most devastating and disturbing satire in English (and - dare we say it? - the world!). The series will include biographical information, a critical examination of the text, and a measure of Swift's influence – including Joyce, Beckett, Yeats, Flann O'Brien, Orwell, Melville, and more. Swift is the antidote to the banality of humanity – a Swift Kick provides a bright start to any day!

Backtalk!
Listeners Respond ...

Dear [Mario] Murillo (Public Affairs Dir.):

While I was listening to "Wildman" Steve Brill's radio show, he announced [that] the show would no longer be regularly scheduled. Mario, come on. Steve's show is one of your best programs. It's great. What's more important than educating us to understand, love, and use the environment? 'BAI's best [hosts] are Gary Null, Mike Feder, and Steve Brill. Though I'm poor and unemployed, I support WBAI because of these shows. Please don't put me in a position to reevaluate my support for 'BAI. Keep Steve Brill's show. He's only on every other week. In fact, you should put him on weekly, instead of cancelling his show. Please re-think this.

C. Kaufman

Editor's Note: Steve's show has not been permanently cancelled, although WBAI has been rotating some programs to allow other producers some air time. "Foraging With the Wild Man" will again air on Tuesday evenings, from 8:00 - 9:00 pm. We do, however, appreciate your concern.

Dear Carletta [Joy Walker] (JOY Journal):

I have wanted to call several times but, unfortunately, I'm usually driving home from work when your program comes on, and I'm not one of those people who can afford either a car phone or the long distance charges. [Y]our show [and] the people who called in were riveting. I ended up sitting in my driveway in the cold for the last 20 minutes, just listening, unable to go into the house. I have not read the Lightfoot book referred to because it is always checked out when I try to get it in the library, but I have read Alice Walker. "Possessing the Secret of Joy" moved me so much I wrote an article about it that will be published in a very abridged version by a local newspaper, Fairfield County Woman, this spring. I thought it might interest you, so I've enclosed it. I thought it was interesting that during your program, most of the men who called had a political axe to going, whereas all of the women were coming from a very personal viewpoint. I got angry at the man who said all of this was of no interest to white people. Does he think we're all Neanderthals? Not to mention the fact that just the thought of someone cutting into another girl or woman fills me with rage. Anyway, I just love you, athough I've never met you, and I loved the way you dealt with that guy and so many others. I would like to have even half of your strength and poise under fire. Thanks for being there, and for keeping your finger on the pulse. If it's any consolation, there must be legions of us out there who listen to your program and find hope and courage from it. I know that you've got a new fundraising campaign starting, and although I am struggling to make a living as a writer, I am enclosing a check for $25 to the station to ad my support for programs like yours. All the "Talkback" hosts are interesting, of course. including Playthell Benjamin (whom I picture as a black Orson Welles). My husband studied under him in Amherst and assures me I'm not far off. [G]ood luck with your future efforts, and I hope you find something of value in the article. Obviously, I can't do anything commercial with it until after its publication in the spring, but I feel strongly about the subject and urge you to use any part of it you wish in the context of a personal letter from me to you. Thanks again.

S. Davenport

To Fred GeoBold, Cohorts & Conspirators United (Lightshow):

Herewith enclosed is my "personal size" application to the Squeegee Scam School of Restaurant Aspirants. I have my bar of soap at hand and await class schedules. Your entrepreneurial spirit, no doubt, makes our "foundering fathers" smile in their graves (in which we trust they will remain). Obviously, it's up to us, now, to clean up the system. Peace & purification!

Joan

Dear [Sally] O'Brien & [Zenzile] Khoisan (Cuba In Focus):

Thank you for bringing to WBAI the tape of the pro-Cuban socialist, anti-U.S. imperialist rally at Symphony Space demanding an end to the U.S. blockade of Cuba. The speakers were inspiring to me given my support for the Cuban revolution. Personally, I would like to hear much more pro-socialist and anti-imperialist programming on WBAI. It seems to me that too many producers on the station lack both socialist and anti-imperialist consciousness, and are quite content to "do their own thing" without any second thoughts. Certainly, class analysis is the last thing most of them would do (not to speak of Marxism purview). Certainly we need in this country a broad-based left and progressive movement that is clearly anti-imperialist and pro-socialist. To this end, WBAI could be quite a facilitator if there is a common feeling stoked to move in this direction.

Dennis M. Goldstein

Dear WBAI:

I want to congratulate and thank WBAI, Annette Walker, and Rosalba Rolon for the wonderful treat on March 6 in which you presented two hours of song, culture and history interpreted through our "National Voice of Puerto Rico," Luz Esther Benitez (Lucecita). This can only be done at WBAI, of course! Through this program, I decided to subscribe and be an advocate of your station and your programming. Once again, thank you for presenting us this gift from our Patria, Puerto Rico.

Juan Rodriguez

Ms. Annette Walker (re Rondas Latinas):

I wish to thank WBAI for its in-depth broadcast of that songstress without par, Lucecita Benitez. I have seen her in concerts [and] have a large, though not complete, collection of her cassettes. As with the "loaves and fishes" story in the Bible, she "eats" a song and then multiplies its essence by singing. And the final test - only Lucecita makes me cry; the good, bitter-sweet tears. The [general] embargo against her airplay is a blessing lost.

Growth

It is extremely important for one to realize when growth is not possible through and in a relationship. Even though it may seem painful, one must learn to let go of the negative seeds & then opt for positive change. There is an old saying, "one can't beat a dead horse." In a sense, it says that it's truly a waste to emotionally beat oneself over a past association. Past being synonymous with dead means, that it is imperative, for one to cast out the dead carcass then allow growth to achieve that new heightened level of awareness by transcending self-imposed misery. Sometimes one must lance a wound then squeeze the puss out.

Spoken Words

When I die, I hope that my children, and those who truly care, will understand what I tried to build/repair with the bit of life I've left (despite the pain, venting & ignorance), which is (was) to make a statement/speak my mind (I'm still learning), and change, build, repair relations, humanity, values and decency, that we as a people (i.e., the species of human beings being human), suffering the same greed and passion (or, rather, greed as passion), which tears us unto one another and deprives us of the possibility of a more genuinely progressive humane alternative, which is so desperately lacking in these times and which can provide the only cure for the tribalistic, ism-filled, me-vs.-you mentality imposed on us by the True Powers That Be (Our Real Enemy). I still (as I now live and breathe--barely), aspire to this aim, goal, objective, dream, illusion. But, if I (we) don't make it, please don't say I didn't try.
